AUGUST SEMM DIES

Sept. 15, 1914

Early Monday morning, August Semm, who was a typhoid patient at Groton Hospital, passed away. It had been known that he was a very sick man, but his condition wasn't such as to indicate that death was so near. About one o'clock the attending nurse had been at his bedside, and he seemed to be resting as usual. Shortly afterward difficult breathing was noted, and his life went out before a physician could reach him.

Deceased was a hard-working mechanic, whose home had been in Groton for nearly twelve years. Some months ago he met with an accident while engaged at carpenter work at Big Stone, and was laid up for several weeks. Recovering he had resumed his usual avocation, until taken with typhoid fever a couple of weeks ago.

He was forty-seven years of age, and is survived by a widow and five daughters, one of whom is married. The widow and her bright little girls have the sincere sympathy of all in their great bereavement.

Funeral services will be held at the Methodist Church on Thursday afternoon at 2:00.
